The juvenile court commission, composed of Mayor Ezra Thompson, Chief of Police George A. Sheets and School Su-perintendent D. H. Christensen has virtually reached the conclusion that it has

It is known that members of the commission are of the same opinion. They may examine F. A. Timby, another eye witness, and Dr. T. B. Beatty, the physician in the case, today; but any action which may be taken will be nothing more drastic than a caution to Judge Brown to exercise more discretion in the future. Judge Brown's friends admit that public censure of his act has been well-nigh universal.

To Abolish the Court.

Lawyers and others who have collided with Judge Brown's court in the past say that a determined effort will be made to have the court abolished by the next legislature. This, they say, would be cheaper and more expeditious than to bring impeachment proceedings before the legislature. Any effort to abolish the court will be met with stubborn resistance on the part of those men and women who have interested themselves in the work of the court, and in the work of the Juvenile Betterment league, which is a sort of auxiliary organization to the court.

The members of the league believe that the time for action has arrived, in fact that there has been too much delay already, and that, if necessary, the citizens of Salt Lake should hold a general mass meeting, where the vital question of civic improvements for this city could be discussed from every standpoint. It is more than likely that a mass meeting will be arranged for in the near future. The meeting will not be for the benefit of any particular street or discommunity.

The board of governors will hold a special meeting at the Y. M. C. A. next Tuesday night.

Even the warmest friends of the court ay, however, that they would rather see abolished than have Mayor Thompson and Chief Sheets appoint some man judge of it in reward for service to the "American" party, regardless of his qualifications for the office.

Will Meet Again Today.

The commission will meet again today, but its decision is practically foreshadowed in advance. Judge Brown was appointed for a specified term, which does not expire until Dec. 31, 1998. Several lawyers, including Assistant County Attorney Willard Hanson, hold that the commission, even should it find that Judge Brown was guilty of improper conduct, could do nothing more than request him to resign. To secure his removal, it is claimed, impeachment proceedings before the legislature would be necessary.

The proposition was turned down, the league taking the position that a choice in favor of asphalt has already been made, therefore it is up to the property owners to ake the initiative in calling the mass meeting. The understanding last evening was that this course will be taken.

saw first in a vision when they appeared before her in their "spiritual forms." Mrs. Marsh is said to be now living at Helper. Utah, and her husband says she has adopted the Mormon faith.

According to the complaint filed by attorneys for Marsh, he and his wife were living happily together on a ranch near Beulah, Colo., until the shadowy forms of the two "spirits" crossed their paths, or rather the path of Mrs. Marsh. Husband and wife had previously embraced the faith of spiritualism.

Two years passed by, and Mrs. Marsh, it seems, reached the conclusion that she had made a serious mistake in selecting Roscoe as her affinity, and decided that the other vision was the "spirit form" of her true affinity. With as little ceremony as that exercised when she deserted Marsh, she packed up her belongings and sought out the home of the original of the other vision and, according to what is set forth in the complaint, she was received with open arms by this man. Who he is or where he resided then or now, Marsh is unable to tell. All he knows is that his wife went to live with him.

Marsh Seeks a Divorce.

Eight years have passed since the two spirits made their appearance in the Marsh household, and the unhappy hus-band has decided that a divorce decree Marsh household, and the unhappy husband has decided that a divorce decree should be spread on the records of the district court at Denver, chronicling the legal separation of the pair. When he reached this conclusion, Marsh journeyed to Pueblo, Colo., where he and Ora Terry were wedded on Feb. 20, 1894, in the effort to learn her whereabouts so that she could be served with a summons in the divorce suit. As near as he could ascertain, he recites in his complaint, she had removed to Helper, Utah, and "had adopted the Mormon faith."

He Dies Suddenly.

While walking about the lawn with his sister and brother to get fresh air he collapsed before the physicians could be summoned. It is believed that he died from heart failure brought on by poisoning and from exhaustion.

Some months ago he and his mother came here from Montana and he had been trying to secure employment. His efforts proved futile and it is said that, in order to get money, he forged his mother's name a week or ten days ago to a check which he cashed at a mercantile store in Sugar House ward. The check was returned to the mother and the son could not endure the disgrace. Since that time he had been despondent. He spent considerable time lying about the barn and did not associate much with his mother and brother and sister.

He was paying his attention to a young girl living in the ward, and, it is said, this forgery trouble resulted in their estrangement. The letter to the mother was not made, public and its contents could not be learned. Eber W. Hall, the undertaker, was called to take charge of the body. It was not moved from the house, but was laid out there.
